Introduction

Surgical apparel is used to provide optimal level of protection by reducing the transfer of bacteria from the skin to the surgical staff. Surgical apparel is also known as surgical clothing. Some of the surgical appeals are surgical gloves, face masks, head wear, scrub suits, chemotherapy gowns, foot wear, drapes and surgical gowns. Surgical apparel is essential as there are always microorganisms on the skin even after conducting sterilization procedure and strict hygiene. Surgical apparels protect bacteria from entering the surgical wound. Surgical apparels also protect healthcare staff from bodily fluids, blood, saline, urine and other chemicals during surgical procedure.

Surgical Gowns

Surgical gowns are medical products. Surgical gowns are unique attire worn by either patients or doctors/surgeons who are scheduled to undergo/perform some form of invasive medical treatment; these gowns can typically found in hospitals, health care facilities, and certain first-aid stations. The utility of a sterile surgical gown serves both patient and physician; many doctors find the gown highly compatible for the easy listening of lungs and heart function (due to the thin material typically made of cotton that comprise the average gown).

For doctors, surgical gowns protect them from potentially infectious biomaterial while simultaneously preventing anything from the surgeon team infecting the patient. In terms of form, surgical gowns are short-sleeved and distinctively colored (to identify the wearer as a patient), and often when dealing with hazardous substances can be disposable (made of plastic or paper instead of cotton) to avoid proliferation of biohazards.

Surgical Drapes

Surgical drapes are used in operative room during surgery to cover patient's body to eliminate the risk of surgical site contamination by separating the surgical site from the remaining part of the patient's body, as well as from non-sterile areas of the surgical table. Surgical drapes are offered in different shapes sizes as well as therapy wise. Surgical drapes are the indispensable part of operating room and used for several applications from protecting the patient body to covering utilities. Demand for surgical drapes is increasing due to rising number of surgeries worldwide, increasing focus on infection control and rising awareness about hygiene.

Surgical drapes are available in different shapes, ranges, and sizes. Surgical drapes are used for several applications from securing the patient body to covering utilities. Operations and medical examination needs isolation of the surgical site from the remaining patient body parts to prevent them from getting affected.

Surgical Bed Sheets

The Disposable Bed Sheets are ideal for use within medical and care facilities where there are large quantities of patients, or for individuals with moderate to heavy incontinence. These Bed Sheets are quick and easy to both put on and remove from the bed when needed.

Surgeon Caps

Surgeon caps are widely used by most of the leading surgeons of various leading medical institutions. These caps are most commonly used by surgeons at time of surgeries to cover the head.

The Disposable Surgeon Caps are comfortable and stay in place with simple tie backs. The Disposable Surgeon Caps provide a protective layer between the patient and medical professional during surgical procedures, as well as other processes that may require additional protective layering for the clinician. It promotes hygienic and sanitation practices in a hospital or clinical setting.
