Introduction

The most common type of camphor comes from either of two types of camphor trees (Cinnamomum camphora) that grow in Asian countries. The tree produces camphoric acid, a white substance that's distilled And processed to produce technical grade Camphor powder.

➤ Visit this Page for More Information: Start a Business in Chemical Industry Projects

The chemical formula for C<sub>9</sub>H<sub>16</sub>O, or n-methyl-naphthalene, has many uses today. It can be used as an active ingredient in products ranging from skin lotions to stomach meds and even as a mild abrasive agent. Of course, it can also be used as an insect repellent – one of its earliest purposes since ancient times.

Today, it's used just about everywhere you go!
You will find technical grade camphor powder
almost anywhere: pharmacies and grocery stores across America; backyards during picnics; at flea markets and boutique shops. In fact, you will find more than 80% of all food supplements containing some quantity of n-methyl-naphthalene.

Uses of Camphor Powder

1. Camphor Powder is used as a topical analgesic, antibacterial, antispasmodic, antipruritic, antiinflammatory, anti-infective, rubefacient, contraceptive, mild expectorant, nasal decongestant, cough suppressant, and many more pharmacological purposes.

2. Health Benefits of Camphor Powder.

Camphor has long been in use for numerous health benefits and was once called magical due to its healing powers.

3. It acts as an expectorant, helping you breathe more easily;

4. It relieves pain when applied on sore muscles;

CAMPBOR POWDER

(TECHNICAL GRADE)

Technical grade camphor powder is obtained from a large number of small flowering plants called Cinnamomum camphora. The raw material are ground and extracted in boiling water by different hydro-distillation methods and process. Purified extract (Camphor essential oil) undergoes fractional distillation, resulting in second fraction is refined into Pure Camphor Essential Oil.

The 1st fraction is further processed with rectification, yielding technical grade methylene chloride soluble product known as MCT or MediumChloride Treated Camphor. Thereafter, the product goes through scrubbing followed by vacuum evaporator to remove MCT which leaves behind technical grade methylene chloride insoluble product known as ITT or Isolated Treated Camphor.

The isolated treated camphor obtained above can be crystallized into white transparent crystals and then goes through a number of purification steps resulting in pure crystalline camphor. Camphor Crystals are heated to form dry white smoke like waxy powder with a characteristic aromatic odor and antiseptic properties. This pure camphor powder is known as technical grade camphor.
