Zn, zinc is a chemical element. At normal temperature, zinc is a slightly brittle metal that, when its oxidation is eliminated, appears silvery-grey. It is the first element in the periodic table's group 12 (IIB). Zinc and magnesium share a few chemical characteristics, including a single normal oxidation state (+2) and similar-sized Zn^{2+} and Mg^{2+} ions. With an annual production of around 13 million tonnes, zinc is the fourth most used metal after iron, aluminium, and copper. EAF dust is a very fine, dusty substance.

When processing in a kiln, this presents a challenge since material fines get entrained in the process gas flow and eventually depart the kiln with the off-gases, making the operation incredibly wasteful and useless. The fines are made larger by pelletizing them, preventing entrainment in the process gas. In May 2021, zinc prices increased by 50% year over year, rising to $2,965 per metric tonne from $1,975 in May 2020. The hike came after a 45 percent two-year fall from the $3,500 ten-year peak in 2018. Currently, the price is 11.5 percent higher than the 5-year moving average.
