Introduction

India has made lot of progress in agriculture & food sectors since independence in terms of growth in output, yields and processing. It has gone through a green revolution, a white revolution, a yellow revolution and a blue revolution. Today, India is the largest producer of milk, fruits, cashew nuts, coconuts and tea in the world, the second largest producer of wheat, vegetables, sugar and fish and the third largest producer of tobacco and rice. Now the time is to provide better food processing & its marketing infrastructure for Indian industries to serve good quality & safest processed food like ready to eat food. It is opening a new window in world scenario as far as taste & acceptance is concerned. Therefore, Indian Government is providing more infrastructures for this sector. Excise duty is now ZERO % on RTE and 100 % tax deduction for the first 10 years for new units. This allows manufacturers to bring down their prices & spreads its flavors to the world.

The retort processed foods do not require rehydration or cooking and can be consumed straight from the pouch with or without pre-warming, depending upon the requirement of the users and the weather conditions. Some of the mouth-watering dishes in retort pouches include sooji halwa, upma, chicken curry, mutton curry, fish curry, chicken madras, chicken kurma, rajma masala, palak paneer, dal makhni, mutter paneer, potato-peas, mutter mushroom, vegetable pulav chicken pulav, and mutton pulav, etc. The pioneer introduction of retorting technology has made the sale of 'Ready-to-Eat' food products commercially viable with great taste. Ready To Eat, Shelf Stable, Retort Sterilized Foods are completely cooked foods packed in airtight containers, which could be preserved at room temperature for a long period of time without the necessity of freezing, cooling and drying. The thermally-processed retort pouch foods are waterproof, weatherproof and bug proof. The Shelf Life of Ready To Eat Foods is from 1 year to 5 years, depending on the type of packing materials and processing procedures.

Ready to Eat Meals like already cooked or prepared lunch & dinner are relatively new products which came in market only a few years back and are now sold through retail general stores in especially made sealed aluminum laminates. The retorting or sterilization process ensures the stability of the Ready-to-Eat foods in retort pouches, on the shelf and at room temperature.

The application of sterilization technology completely destroys all potentially harmful micro-organisms, thereby making sure that the food product has a very long shelf life of over 12 months and needed no refrigeration. When customer needs to eat, the food item pouch is either put in microwave oven to warm it or keep in heated water for a few minutes and then serve to eat. Such ready to eat meals have been especially given to soldiers in army of many countries who require carrying their rations while on war front or while located far away from their main unit. The advertisements like, "Hungry Kyaa" are adding zest to the market by popularizing such food items which are precooked and free from any preservative, and yet have a long shelf life of over 12-months.

These food items are normally selling in pouches, well packed in cardboard printed boxes of small book size and carry about 300 grams of cooked food at a price of about Rs. 40 to 200 in foreign market depending upon the type of dish packed. One packet of vegetable dish is normally sufficient for one meal for three persons and therefore falls in economic zone of consumer's preferences.

Retort food is cooked food to filled in pouches or containers made of plastic film, metallic foil, or these materials in multi layer form, then sealed by heat sealing followed by sterilisation using heat and pressure. Retort is a cooking process that uses heat and pressure to cook food in its sealed package. Retort conditions are quite demanding with temperatures typically ranging from 251°F to 270°F.

The retort pouch is not exactly new to the market. Scientists hailed it as the most revolutionary development in food packaging since the tin can. The retort pouch, which has been on the market since the 1970s, was jointly invented by the United States Army Natick R&D Command, Reynolds Metals Company, and Continental Flexible Packaging, who jointly received the Food Technology Industrial Achievement Award for its invention in 1978. The retort pouch then became widely used by the US military for field rations. It was then only a matter of time before the pouch would enter the consumer market. The retort pouch was branded as the next big thing which would take market share of the dominant metal can industry. However, two decades went by and no radical changes were seen.

The pouch finally penetrated the US pet food market in May 1999 with Mars Inc.'s launch of "Kal-Kan's Whiskas" cat food in a retort pouch. After pet food, human food progressively made its way into the pouches. A historical date for the retort pouch though was 15 June 2000 when StarKist, a tuna producer owned by Heinz at the time (now owned by Delmonte) announced it would launch "StarKist Tuna" in a pouch.

In order to produce high quality safe Retort Food, it is very important to optimize the retort processing. The product should be sterilized properly to make sure that it is safe for consumption. At the same time, it should not be over cooked or over processed. Because over sterilization kills the taste and food appeal of the product.

Actually speaking, there is no specific technology for processing any specific product in any specific flexible containers. But there are good guidelines for processing the food in flexible containers.

Food value recommendations and technology guidelines from any technologists or institutes are to be understood as general guidelines at best and should always be applied in trial runs followed by microbiological analysis.

Whenever the processor receives the processing technology from a technology transfer center or a food research institute, it should be noted that the mentioned technology was developed only for that particular product, which was processed in a particular type of retort (may be in a small pilot retort), with a particular recipe and formulation, with specific pH value and with specific precooking procedures and cooling method.

That specific process technology should be applicable only for that specific product which should be processed in similar conditions while it was developed by the concerned technologists. It is meaningless to apply the same process technology to other types of dissimilar products. The processor has to develop own specific technology for their specific product based on the type and characteristics of the products, type of packing material, type of retort, type of sterilization method etc. by following the international guidelines for the technology development.

Whenever the processor changes any of the following parameters, he has to re-standardize the existing technology to make it suitable for the new product.

- The container size and type (flat or stand up type pouches with different capacities)
- Orientation of pouches inside the retort (vertical or horizontal)
- Material and structure of pouches (aluminum foiled or microwavable),
- type of packing material (cans, trays or pouches)
- Head Space and amount of vacuum present inside the pouches.
- Product Formulation
- Product quantity
- Recipe
- Retort (type, size, or processing method)
- pre processing techniques
- Cooling method etc.

Market Survey

Industry Overview

The food processing industry has been slated for accelerated growth. It is projected to be a futuristic industry and it is anticipated that, over the years, it will emerge as a leading player in the global markets. As a result, the industry is seen to be witnessing feverish activity.

The size of the processed food market is estimated to be over Rs 110 bn and is growing at 10 to 15% per annum. The Rs 4000-bn food market in India has been growing at the rate of 6.5% a year. The Indian middle class spends an estimated around Rs 700 bn annually on food and groceries alone. The ready-to-eat segment is growing faster as technology is improving and so is the lifestyle of the people.

In the environment of a liberalised global trade regime and the latent potential that the food processing sector offers, the development of the industry is called for in right earnest. But the industry is mired in bottlenecks by way of a multiplicity of laws and the involved administrative machinery.

The popularity of ready to eat packed food now is no longer marks a special occasion. People want value for time, money in terms of quality and variety. The food processing industry is one of the largest industries in India. The ready-to-eat (RTE) sector in the Indian food industry is taking off in no small way, thanks to escalating demand from urban Indians with hectic schedules and others looking for convenient choices, authentic tastes and entrées on the go. This demand for ready-to-eat meals is also propelling interest and investment in India's fledgling food processing sector, with allied businesses in cold chain and logistics also set to grow tremendously.

Players in Ready to Eat Food

- MTR
- Kohinoor Foods
- ITC
- Haldiram
- Tasty Bites

With the food items being categorised into various groups, around 33 per cent of consumers were aware of snacks as a category of RTE products, 26 per cent are aware of meals, 21 per cent are aware of desserts and 20 per cent of the consumers were aware of the pickle category.

The Food processing industry has an important role to play in linking the farmers to the final consumers in the domestic as well as the international markets. Food processing combined with marketing has the potential of solving the basic problems of agricultural surpluses, wastages, rural jobs, and better remuneration to the growers. In the next ten years, food production is expected to double. These produces, if processed and marketed smartly, can make India a leading food supplier of the world. India with a population of 1.08 billion (growing at about 1.70% per annum) provides a large and growing market for food products. Food products are the single largest component of private consumption expenditure, accounting for as much as 49.00 per cent of the total spending. Furthermore, the upward mobility of income classes and increasing need for convenience and hygiene is driving demand for (a) perishables and non food staples and (b) processed foods. Also, eating out is a booming practice in urban India and processed foods are accepted as alternative to the home cooked food because of the convenience it offers. Also, with the globalization of trade and availability of high speed logistics, food retailers in developed countries are sourcing an year-round supply of fruits and vegetables from developing countries. Thus, both for local consumption as well for export there is a year round opportunity for fruits and vegetables, meat and poultry products and ready-to-eat processed foods.

The total exports of Indian food processing industry had increased by about three times to Rs. 53,000 crores in 2003-04, from Rs. 17,600 crores in 2002-03. Considering the greater potential for food processing industry in India, government had committed to encourage various activities for the development of this sector. Indian government had been giving importance to the food processing sector, by way of fiscal incentives to encourage commercialization and value addition of agricultural produce, for minimizing pre/post harvest wastage, generating employment and export growth. The government gave five-year tax holiday for new food processing units in fruits and vegetable processing.

With the income level rising, demand for milk, meat, fish, fruits and vegetables is also increasing in India. With more urbanization, Indian families also consume more processed foods, more ready-to-eat foods, etc. Asian Americans, now numbering over 10 million along with the other 13 million persons of Indian origin spread all over the world are a huge potential market for the Ready-to-eat (RTE) foods out of India. This creates a scope for the producers to come out with a long range of dishes including the usual meals. India had been at the forefront for variety of dishes both in domestic and global market. Ready-to-eat foods are very popular in the western region of the world. Even India is being influenced by these ready-to-eat foods. Development of the metropolitan cities due to increase in population, emergence of industries, evolution of various new factors, time factor, etc., created the need for ready-to-eat foods in the market. Due to industrialization, the labour category is getting attracted to it because of better emoluments and hence there is shortage of home maid-servants. Due to this, the housewives, in order to save time started using ready-to-eat foods. As the literacy rate is increasing among the women, a large number of them in our country are taking up jobs to setup their own status in the society and to use the extra income generated.

These are creating the need for ready-to-eat foods. Earlier times, a single family consisted of many people i.e., a group of several nuclear families were living in a single place. Hence, larger quantities of the food were used to be prepared. But as these joint families started disappearing due to various reasons, each single family started using these ready-toeat foods in order to save time and energy.

Due to establishment of multi-national companies in India, the lady of the house also started working, because of which there is no time to prepare food at home. Hence, this created the need for using ready-to-eat foods.

The standard of living is also changing due to raise in income level, influence of western countries, more global trade, traveling etc.; hence, people are changing their taste to ready-to-eat foods more compared to the old traditionally prepared foods. In the modern era, the media, particularly electronic and print media, are playing an important role in creating awareness of the products manufactured and released in the market.

All these factors are responsible for the popularity of ready-to-eat food products in Indian market. The marketers should see to it that the ready-to-eat food is available to the consumers without any difficulty at competitive rates. The products should be provided to consumers by keeping in mind as when they want, where they want and the manner in which they want. These methods help in increasing the sales of the product with good feed back from the customers and creating niche for ready-to-eat foods in the market.

The growth expected in India's food processing sector is based on sound fundamentals. On the supply side, India is among the leading producers of wheat, milk, rice, fruits and vegetables and other agro-commodities. The focus is now on improving productivity, reducing losses due to poor storage facilities, strengthening supply chain, improving rural infrastructure and providing quality food to all at affordable prices. On the demand side, there has been a major shift in the food consumption basket of Indians as a result of changing demographics and socio-economic structure of India's population as well as urbanization and rising disposable incomes.

To bring India's food processing industry at par with the best in the world and be the preferred choice for processed foods, the Indian government has adopted a positive outlook towards foreign investment in this sector. Under the automatic route, 100 per cent FDI is allowed in the sector, while the country is forging partnerships with various countries to enhance trade in processed foods and has granted a considerable degree of autonomy to state governments to identify partners to spur growth in food processing industry.

For example, France and India have hailed the "strategic importance" of the Asian country's food processing and agricultural sectors. The opportunity for NRIs and PIOs is immense in this sector, as the country is looking at best practices; technology and people who can help develop the sector and build a trained workforce for the rising sector. As the country adopts a decentralized model for developing the food processing industry, partnering with states will be the best way to do business in this sector.

About Financial Statements of CMIE Database

A reasonably comprehensive list of all the information is listed in this flattened structure. The list reflects the usual disclosures made by companies. It is long as it tries to capture as much of granular information as possible.

Separately, CMIE database captures the disclosures made by companies in their Annual Reports according to the various Accounting Standards specified by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India and according to the stipulations of the Reserve Bank of India.

There is an overlap of information presented and the disclosures as per the Accounting Standards and RBI stipulations. The data is normalised as per the CMIE database methodology and the rest is captured without normalisation since these presentations are highly standardised.

Profits & Appropriations

Description:

There are various measures of profits of companies. These are either gross or net of depreciation, amortisation, interest payments, direct taxes, prior-period and extra-ordinary transactions, etc. All measures of profits are essentially derived from the entries made under income and expenses in the CMIE database. Since all sources of income and all heads of expenses are captured comprehensively in CMIE database, it is possible to derive the various measures of profits from these.

Profit after tax is an atomic indicator in CMIE database. The rest of the profit measures are all derived indicators. The profits after tax and all other measures of profits as derived from the database may differ from the profits as presented by the company. The most likely cause for this difference is the treatment of transactions pertaining to prior periods or because of extra-ordinary transactions during a year.

As mentioned earlier, profit after tax is an atomic Indicator in CMIE database. All other measures of profits are derived Indicators and these are presented in Measures of Profits under Derived Indicators of Profits. Some of these are applicable only to finance companies. These are PBPDTA and PBPT and their variants. PBDITA and its variants are applicable only to non-finance companies. The other two derived measures of profits used in CMIE database are PBT and Cash profits. These are applicable to all kinds of companies like PAT and its variants.

The term "variants" used earlier refers to the various income and expense items that are netted out to derive measures of profits that are often more useful than the profit measures gross of these. For example, one of the variants is the suffix "net of P&E". "P&E" is prior period and extra-ordinary transactions. Profits are reduced by the net income from prior period and extra-ordinary transactions to ensure that the profits reflect transactions of the current year.

Other variant suffixes are "net of P&E&OI", which is net of prior period and extra-ordinary transactions and net of other income; and, "net of P&E&OI&FI", which is net of prior period and extra-ordinary transactions, net of other income and net of financial services incomes.

All these variants for the various profit measures are presented under Measures of Profits.

Derived Indicators of Profits includes one set of measures under Distribution of Profits. There are distributions of four measures of profits. These are - PBDITA, PBPDITA, PBPT and PAT. While the distribution of PAT shows the share of dividends and retained profits, the rest show the share of PAT and other components of the measures of profits. For example, PBDITA consists of provisions, write-offs, depreciation, amortisation, interest and PAT.

Profitability ratios are derived Indicators based on measures of profits, income and assets and liabilities. Over 35 such measures are provided in the CMIE database. These are divided into two parts - profit margins of income and returns over investments.

A number of Indicators that are used in the derivation of the sources of growth in profits are presented under the sub-part Sources of growth in profits. There are three measures of profits for which these Indicators are provided - PBDITA, PBT and PAT. Growth itself is computed at run-time and is not stored in CMIE database. However, these Indicators are used to understand the sources of growth in the three measures of profits. This understanding is based on a simple but useful arithmetical construct.

Total Liabilities

Description:

Total liabilities of a company are the sum of all the resources deployed by it. It includes all sums it owes to the shareholders in the form of share capital and reserves and surpluses, all sums it owes its lenders in the form of secured and unsecured loans and all current liabilities and provisions. It includes deferred tax liability.

In the CMIE database, total liabilities balance total assets and, total liabilities is the sum of the following:

1. Paid up shares and similar capital such as, forfeited equity capital, paid up preference capital, capital contribution, convertible warrants and minority interest reserves.
2. Reserves and funds, net of accumulated losses, if any. These include premium reserves, capital redemption reserves, revaluation reserves, employee stock option reserves, general reserves and balance as per profit and loss statement. While revaluation reserves is included here, in most presentations of CMIE database, it is netted out.
3. Borrowings
4. Current liabilities & Provisions
5. Deferred tax liability

The Annual Report provides a lot of information besides a structured presentation as outlined above. For example, it provides details of the authorised capital, issued and subscribed capital, number of shares issued, details of buy-backs, etc. All of this is covered under the Addendum information of Liabilities.

CMIE database makes fine distinctions in defining share holders funds and net worth. It defines free and specific reserves and capital employed clearly so that the same definitions apply to all companies. All of this a some more Indicators are presented in Derived Indicators of Liabilities.

Derived Indicators also include an entire section "Secured & unsecured borrowings". This section helps in the selection of Indicators relating to borrowings directly. The presentation in the main listing of all Indicators has one list of secured borrowings with its detailed break-up and another list of unsecured borrowings with its detailed break-up. As a result, the selection of total bank borrowings implied always adding secured bank borrowings and unsecured bank borrowings. To avoid the tedium, the Derived Indicators of Liabilities includes this section that provides the secured and unsecured borrowings for most of the frequently used borrowing items.

Total Assets

Description:

Total assets is a sum total of all the assets held by a company as on the last day of an accounting period. An asset is recognised in the balance sheet when it is probable that the future economic benefits associated with it will flow to the enterprise. As per Part I of Schedule VI of Companies Act 1956, assets are required to be disclosed under the heads Fixed Assets, Investments, Current Assets, Loans and Advances and Miscellaneous Expenditure not written off. This data field is broadly the sum of the amounts disclosed under each of these assets. Computationally and more precisely, this is the sum of the following data fields:

- Net fixed assets
- Capital work in progress and net pre-operative expenses pending allocation, if any
- Investments
- Inventories
- Receivables
- Loans & advances
- Cash & bank balances
- Deferred tax assets
- Miscellaneous expenses not written off

Net Cash Flow from Operating Activities

Description:

Cash flow from operating activities is the cash generated from the main or primary business activities of the company.

A company can present the cash flow statement under the direct or indirect method of presentation. This data field provides the amount of cash flow generated from operating activities, which is calculated, under the indirect method.

Under indirect method, the net profit or loss before tax and extraordinary income is used to calculate the amount of net cash flow generated from operating activities. In other words, the indirect method adjusts net income for items that affected reported net income but did not affect cash. Since income statement is prepared on an accrual basis, in which revenue is recognized when earned and not when received, net income does not represent the net cash flow from operating activities and it is necessary to adjust it for those items which affect net income although no actual cash has been paid or received against them.

To compute net cash flows from operating activities, non cash charges in the income statement are added back to net income, and non cash incomes deducted. Further, cash flows on account of changes in the working capital of the company are included.

When accounts receivable increase during the year, revenues on an accrual basis are higher than on a cash basis because goods sold on account are reported as revenues. In other words, operations for the period led to increased revenues, but not all of these revenues resulted in an increase in cash. Some of the increase in revenues resulted in an increase in accounts receivable. To convert net income to net cash flow from operating activities, the increase in accounts receivable must be deducted from net income.

When accounts payable increase during the period, expenses on an accrual basis are higher than they are on a cash basis because expenses are incurred for which payment has not taken place. To convert net income to net cash flow from operating activities, the increase in accounts payable must be added back to net income.

Cash flows from operating activities are obtained, broadly, by the following method:

Add: Net Profit before tax and extraordinary incomes Add: Non-cash Expenses (Depreciation, Amortization, Provisions made, write offs) Less: Non-cash Incomes (provisions written back) Add: Non-operating Expenses (Interest paid) Less: Non-operating Incomes (Interest, dividend income) Add: Non-operating Losses (Loss on Sale of Non-Current Assets, Foreign exchange losses) Less: Non-operating Gains (Gain on Sale of Non-Current Assets, Foreign exchange gains)

Qualities of Ready to Eat Food

Qualities of Retort Food

- Safety -should be free from chemical additives and preservatives
- High Nutritional value – proteins, fat, carbohydrate, vitamins, minerals etc.
- Good Taste
- Food Appeal – is the sum of sensory characteristics: appearance, flavor, smell and texture.
- Suitability and Consumer Value: - freshness, shelf stability, suitability for the intended purpose and convenience.
- Reasonable price.

Effects of Over Sterilization / Over Cooking of Retort Food:-

Any application of heat will alter the nutrients and the sensory characteristics of a food product in a number of ways.

- Denaturing and Coagulation of Proteins
- Gelling and Liquifying of Starches and Carbohydrates.
- Decrease/destruction of Vitamins & Other Growth Elements.
- Caramelization of the Sugars
- Browning caused by “Maillard Reactions”.
- Pigment Breakdown and the Denaturing of Spices.

What are the Effects of Under-Sterilization?

The under-sterilized retort food may be affected by different types of Bacteria. The bacteria/spores found in retort food include Psychrophiles (survives at -12 to +20 deg C), Mesophiles (survives from 10 to 45 deg C) and Thermophiles (from 40 to 70 deg C). The bacterial spore is not, in itself a hazard to the thermally-processed products. It is the eventual germination, outgrowth and proliferation of organism resulting in spoilage.

So it is very important to implement the proper technology for retort processing applications. The proper technology and optimization of the processing makes the food equivalent to its fresh equivalence in all respects, including colour, taste, food appeal, flavor, vitamins, proteins, nutrients etc where as improper processing results in the production of unsafe junk foods with poor quality.

Method of Retort Processing

System Analysis

Many retort processors are producing the food without optimizing the retort processing properly. They are mainly concerned about the safety of the product. The quality is badly compromised in such cases.

Normally they take the process technology for any particular product from any of technology transfer centers. They do not realize that the mentioned technology was developed only for a particular product processed in a specific container in a specific type of retort. It will not hold good, if the processor changes any of the pre-defined conditions.

But the processor implements the same conditions for many other dissimilar products. They fix a particular filling temperature, holding temperature, holding time (sterilization time), cooling time, over pressure etc in the retort controls and process different types of dissimilar products under similar conditions. Whether it is rice, vegetable, chicken, fish, meat or soups, the processor fix a pre-set program in the retort which includes the fixed come up time, holding time, sterilization time, over pressure and cooling time.

Improper Retort processing leads to the following damages to the Processor :-

- Spoilage of products will be more
- Reduction of shelf life of products
- Loss of food qualities including taste, color, flavor, aroma, nutrient values etc.
- Bursting, seal breakage and spoilage of pouches during processing
- Under sterilization of the products leads to the development of poisonous bacteria called Clostridium Botulinum which is harmful for human beings.
- Variation in the qualities of the products processed in the same retort
- The failure of the products in the market even though the sample pouches pass through the microbial tests.
- Rejection of the products from export market
- Non approval from export inspection authorities like FDA / USDA etc

Validation or Regular monitoring—method to be chosen for retort processing

Validation includes Heat Distribution and Heat Penetration Studies.

Pressure probes also can be used for monitoring the pressure inside the retort.

So while doing the processing, the customer can always cross verify that the retort processing is done based on the pre-defined technology and any deviation in the pre-defined values could be detected immediately. If there is a deviation from the pre-defined value during the course of the processing, then the processor could control the retort manually to reach the required safe Fo values.

Packaging Style for Retort Food

Generally, the construction for retort pouch is PET/ON/Al/ CPP or PET/Al/ON/ CPP which make good use of heat resistance and high barrier performance of aluminium foil. Usually, retort pouch is located in carton box, but recently we can see retort pouch itself without carton box.

Required Quality for Retort Pouch

- 1) Heat resistance
- 2) Barrier performance
- 3) Aroma preservation
- 4) Bag fall resistance, pin-hole resistance
- 5) High seal strength
- 6) Automatic filling property
- 7) Hygienic

Materials for Retort Pouch

1) Surface materials:

2) Barrier materials:

3) Reinforce material:

4) Sealant:

5) Adhesive:

Oriented PET Film

It requires for the materials of retort pouch that the heat resistance, strength, seal strength, no blocking, printability, and dimensional stability.

Oriented Nylon(ON)Film

1) Non transparent type

2) Transparent type

3)Cast Polypropylene

CPP has function of protector against pin-hole and aluminium foil corrosion as a sealant which is located most inside layer of the pouch. Also sealability and impact strength are required; CPP for retort grade which has heat resistance and impact strength should be used for this application.

4) Aluminium Foil

Aluminium foil is one of the basic materials for retort pouch because it has excellent barrier performance against light, oxygen and water vapor.

5) Adhesive

Dry lamination is suit for retort pouch (extrusion coating cannot use). Heat resistance is different between semi retort grade CPP and high retort grade CPP. There is slight difference of adhesion performance even if the same kind of component adhesive.

Construction of Retort Pouch

1) Transparent type

In case of transparent type retort pouch, we can see the content from the outside but compare with the pouch which using aluminium foil, barrier performance for oxygen, water, aroma and light is not perfect.

2) Non transparent type

About nontransparent type, aluminium foil which can be cut off water, oxygen, aroma, light perfectly is used as middle layer material. Therefore, this type of pouch can be maintain the quality contents for a long time (1-2 years) same as can and bottle under the normal temperature condition.

3) Container and lidding

There are non-transparent type and transparent type for lidding of retort cup. Construction is basically same as retort pouch.

Advantages of Retort Packaging

- Pouch laminates permits less chance to overcook during the retorting thus products having better color, texture & less nutrients loss.
- It requires less energy for sterilization.
- It requires less disposal & storage space.
- Low oxygen & moisture permeability.
- Shelf stable for longer time & requires no refrigeration.
- Sun light barrier, light weight, easy to open.

Protecting the containers from spoilage during Retort processing

It is very important to study the behaviour of flexible containers during the retort processing to make sure that the containers are not exposed to high stress and stretching during the processing. Over stretching of the flexible containers lead to the loss of barrier properties and in turn fail to achieve the shelf life.

The development of pressure within the packages when heated is caused by :

- Expansion of headspace gases
- Expansion and release of gases entrapped within the food product
- Generation of water vapour
- Release of gases due to reduced solubility of dissolved gases at higher temperatures.
- Thermal expansion of the solid and liquid phases of the food.

The following defects could occur to the pouches due to inadequate over pressure controls:-

- Delamination
- Loss of Barrier Properties
- Over Stretching
- Weak Seal
- Bursting
- Waffling
- Channel Leaker
- CUT or Puncture
- Flex Cracks
- Leaking from the surface
