Introduction

The process of recycling waste tyres into rubber granules is known as (Production of Rubber Granules from Waste Tyre) or 'tyre pyrolysis'. Pyrolysis is thermal decomposition in the absence of oxygen. In other words, it's burning tyres without oxygen to produce fuel. Production business of rubber granules from waste tyre is the process of recycling waste tyres into useful products like rubber granules. This is a great way to reduce pollution and make some extra money. The process is simple and can be done with minimal investment. All you need is a waste tyre, some tools.

Uses/Applications

Production of Rubber Granules from Waste Tyre is also known as crumb rubber. Crumb rubber is a versatile material that can be used in a variety of applications, including flooring, playgrounds, and tires. The production process typically involves breaking down the tyres into smaller pieces, then grinding them into a powder. This powder can then be used to create the crumb rubber. A profit margin of 10% - 20% is common for this type of industry and higher margins can be achieved depending on the market conditions at the time you enter to the industry.

Manufacturing Process

1. The first step is to shred the waste tyres into small pieces.
2. This can be done with a tyre shredder.
3. The next step is to extract the steel wire from the tyre pieces.
4. This can be done with a magnet.
5. The next step is to grind the rubber pieces into a powder.
6. This can be done with a grinder. The next step is to press the rubber powder into granules which are then dried and bagged.
7. Finally, they are sorted by size and packed in bags before being shipped out for sale. The small pieces of tyre are then fed into a machine called a tire shredder where they are shredded into even smaller pieces, known as crumb rubber. The crumb rubber is then cleaned and screened to remove any impurities.
