Description

Handbook on Herbal Medicines
(Ayurveda Cream, Oil, Pain Balm, Tablet, Herbal Capsules, Churna, Syrup, Medicines with Composition, Rasa Preparations with Production Process, Machinery, Equipment Details and Factory Layout)
About the Book
Herbal medicines, sometimes referred to as herbal remedies or botanical medicine, have a long history of use spanning centuries as a natural approach to addressing various health conditions. These treatments are derived from plants and their components, such as leaves, flowers, stems, roots, and seeds. Herbal medicines leverage the therapeutic properties found in nature to promote general health and well-being. One of the key advantages of herbal medicines is their holistic approach to health. Unlike pharmaceutical drugs that often target specific symptoms, herbal remedies aim to treat the underlying cause of the ailment by addressing the body as a whole. This integrative approach focuses on supporting the body's innate healing mechanisms and restoring balance.

The Herbal Medicine Market Size was valued at USD 148.5 Billion and is projected to grow from USD 165.13 Billion to USD 386.07 Billion in coming years, exhibiting a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 11.20%. The demand for herbal medicinal goods has grown as people become more aware of allopathic medications' side effects and the advantages of using them instead. The expanding population, coupled with an increase in the prevalence of chronic diseases, is another market driver impacting market growth.

The market of herbal medicines will rise due to consumer preferences for natural and herbal goods. Natural goods like herbal medications and health supplements are popular among young people and those close to retirement. As a result, healthcare spending has changed as more senior citizens use herbal medications to maintain their active lifestyles. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), around 80% of the world's population consults traditional health practitioners for plant-based medicines, as they believe that products labeled as 'natural' are safe to consume and do not have any side effects on their health.
