Paprika oleoresin (also known as paprika extract or oleoresin paprika) is an oil-soluble extract derived from the fruits of Capsicum annuum or Capsicum frutescens that is largely used as a food colourant and/or flavouring. It's made up of vegetable oil (usually between 97 and 98 percent), capsaicin (the main flavouring element that gives it pungency in higher quantities), and capsanthin and capsorubin (the main colouring compounds) (among other carotenoids).
