

How to grow Citrus Fruits: Planting, Growing, and Harvesting Lemon, Orange, Mosambi, Sweet Lime, Mandarin, Grapefruit, Kinnow Mandarin, Sour Lime, Pummelo, Orchard

Description:

Citrus trees are evergreen and can have both flowers and fruit at the same time, so they are treated a bit differently than other fruit trees. They store food reserves in their leaves and must therefore be protected from stresses that will cause leaf drop. Although the cycles are not as obvious as the cycles in temperate fruit trees, citrus trees go through different stages throughout the year.

Citrus are hungry plants and need regular feeding. Use high nitrogen summer feed (such as liquid lawn food which is widely available) from late March to October. There is no need to feed from late October to late March.

Citrus fruits are produced all around the world. They contain healthy nutrition content that works wonders for the body. Citrus fruits act as a fabulous source of vitamin C and a wide range of essential nutrients required by the body. India only represents a mere 4% of global citrus fruit production. But now a day, there is a rise in its cultivation. This rise in citrus production is mainly due to the increase in cultivation areas & the change in consumer preferences towards more health & convenience food consumption & the rising incomes. Citrus fruits have long been valued as part of a nutritious and tasty diet. The flavours provided by citrus are among the most preferred in the world, and it is increasingly evident that citrus not only tastes good, but is also good for people.
