

How to Start Hospital Supply Business

Description:

A surgical drape is a non-woven covering made of disposable material that is used to cover a patient's region. A fenestration (an aperture) in a drape allows the surgeon to execute the procedure. It is available in a variety of sizes, depending on the sort of operation. Drapes differ from one hospital to the next. For an eye operation, a 15-square-inch drape with a 3-square-inch fenestration might suffice, whereas for open heart surgery, the largest drape available, a laparotomy drape that covers the entire body, is required. Surgical drapes are used to keep the operating room clean and bacteria-free.
