A gravure cylinder comprises a (typically) steel cylinder base, or an underlying metal structure that supports the engraved image-carrying layer. There are two primary types of cylinder bases: sleeve cylinders and shaft cylinders. A sleeve cylinder differs from a shaft cylinder in that it needs to have shafts attached prior to installing it on the press, whereas a shaft cylinder, as its name indicates, comes with shafts attached. The disadvantages of a sleeve cylinder include the fact that different shafts (with their own peculiar inaccuracies) are used during different stages of production—engraving, preparing, and printing—which create inaccuracies in the engraved image and, ultimately, in the printed image. Shaft cylinders, utilizing the same shafts at each stage of production, are remarkably accurate and, not surprisingly, are the most widely-used cylinder bases.
