Break Even Point (BEP):	53.63 %
TCI:	93.00 Lakh
Cost of Project:	93.00 Lakh

The impressive growth of the Indian software industry has been possible for several reasons. India possesses the world's second largest pool of scientific manpower which also happens to be English speaking. Coupled with the fact that the manpower costs are low. It provides India with an edge in the world market, but more importantly India has that inborn talent for software development. Also over the years the Indian Software Industry has built up a strong image in the international market. The Indian Software Industry is planning to reposition itself to achieve the exponential growth rates experienced by American Software Companies. It contemplates moving away from the image of supplier of cheap labour and recreating itself as provider of value added services.
